Thanks to all. You can split a window in two, just right click on a tab, or go to chrome://extensions/ and double click on the install button. Is that what you wanted? I think it is great that you are adding such a useful application for the community! 1. Right click and then select Tab groups -> Make groups. Add, or remove, as needed. If you have multiple tabs open you might want to reorganize them into groups. You can do this by: a) Double click the top tab or b) click each tab, then drag it to a new window/group. 2. Go to chrome://extensions/ and double click on the "Extension" icon in the "Extensions" menu. 3. Select the "Search" tab. Enter the name of the extension you wish to install, and then select "Add Extension". It's a way more useful solution than just double-clicking on each tab and then resizing it. 1. I tend to make the default tab be the main window and the ones that I can't remember I just sort them in order of my preference so the first one is the important one, then un-used ones, etc. I've moved back and forth between them over time so it's just how I organize them. 2. Dualless for Chrome is a lightweight extension that provides you with multiple layout panels for the Chrome web browser in a compact popup window. 1) The sizes of the area used for the labels differ from the title. This is annoying and creates a problem for organizing text messages on the chart. 2) A new shortcut appears for the extension after it has been installed. The shortcut is 'Dualless for Chrome'. Can this be changed to something more recognizable? You can also add other shortcuts such as 'Dualless for Chrome' for another layout, etc. 3) The extension is a lightweight and does not cause your system slow down? 4) I run it in the very early hours, in the morning and night. But the result is always the same: It does not open the left and right windows in the exact same time? This means that the size of the window in the middle is 1.5 time too big, so that the whole window is too large. 5) The panel sizes are completely random. I can find a very "neat" and compact panel, but that has hardly anything in it, and then I can see another panel that is twice the size. In other words, the panel sizes are random and only very small ones occur. 6) The right window starts to overlap the left window when the left window is in focus. This obviously leads to very minor content overlapping. You can adjust this in the settings, however. 7) When you work with a table, the title does not fit correctly in the right panel. This leads to ugly borders around the title and the table. 8) Will there be an option to choose which panel should have the focus when several are opened? 9) The extension does not recognize the 'My Library' folder in Chrome. Can this be fixed? 10) The width of the images is not set correctly. The images I have set are not displayed in the panels, but then in the main window. A: 1) The sizes of the area used for the labels differ from the title. This is annoying and creates a problem for organizing text messages on the chart. Click on the large white circle on the left or the large grey circle on the right, and you'll see the title in the browser window. 2) A new shortcut appears for the extension after it has been installed.
